Midget Golf Originators Are Millionaires at 27

By International News Service

NEW YORK July 24—Miniature golf is the latest major industry in this line of golf Courses are springing up like mushrooms in cities and towns all over the country Fully 7000 of the tricky midget layouts are in operation from coast to coast and many others are under construction

Two young men who claim to have originated the baby golf course idea are known as wealthy—millionaires at 27 They are both the same age They are Drake De Lamy president and John Ledbetter vice president and treasurer of the Miniature Golf Courses of America Inc with headquarters in New York City They own the basic patents and control the miniature golf business

Ledbetter interviewed today in his busy office shouted away in a corner of a floor in an office building which hardly one of the dozen with its greens and sand traps mural paintings artificial shrubbery and water hazards containing gold fish would not say how wealthy he and his partner have become but he did emphatically declare that business is great

The miniature golf craze has swept the country this summer he said There are 100 courses in New York alone California has all types with over 1000 Florida where they play outdoors winter and summer has 500 Illinois has at least 200 And so on If there has been a business depression we certainly haven't felt it

So popular has the fad become that Ledbetter and De Lamy have started building a back yard course It costs about $250 and can be installed by the individual Every true golfers back yard is a potential golf course it was pointed out

Low Estate of the Stage.

The low estate of the theatrical business is made evident by an Associated Press dispatch from New York City stating that but twenty-six plays, musical comedies and other straight stage offerings were on view last week throughout the entire United States. Fifteen of these were in New York, where the dullest July since the World war summer of 1917 is being experienced. Chicago, for the first time in ninety-eight years, had but one play during the week. The other ten attractions were scattered throughout the country. Two of these were musical tabloids, five were stock productions and one was a minstrel show.

A year ago last week as many attractions were showing in New York as were showing throughout the land last week, and last year the New York show business wasn't any too good, for under normal conditions the average number of productions on view there in July in recent years up to the present has been about thirty.

President Frank Gilmore, of Equity, holds two things responsible for the New York theatrical situation. "When people are hard up," he explained, "they relinquish, first of all, their luxuries. The theater is, of course, a luxury. There appear to be fewer tourists in New York this summer than there have been for several years. Trips to New York are luxuries, too."

Thus the head of Equity explains the New York theatrical situation by citing hard times. But it is not impossible that another factor has a decided influence. The ordinary traveler often is a patron of the theater, but the traveler from whom the New York producers get the greater return is the one whose purpose in visiting New York is in part, often in large part, to see a number of high-class attractions, and such a traveler often will plan to see six evenings and a couple of matinee performances during a visit of a week. At present there are but three recognized "hits" on the New York stage, and the traveler whose purpose in visiting that city is to see good shows will likely feel that the opportunity to see them is not sufficient to justify the expenditure of the time and money a trip there would entail. Lack of quality is not without its effect on the fortunes of the metropolitan stage.

Attestation of Its Value.

Hon. Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, has been named by Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall, of the Ohio supreme court, as chairman of an advisory board of twenty outstanding Ohioans participating in the Ohio study of judicial administration being conducted by the Institute of Law of Johns Hopkins university. Equally as interesting as the announcement of the selection of the former war secretary as chairman of the board is an announcement by him introducing a projected three-year program for the Ohio study which shows his acceptance of the chairmanship.

"While it is difficult to resist the conclusion that there has come to be a lack of adjustment between the administration of justice and the needs of present-day life," Mr. Baker goes on to say in connection with the announcement of his program, "it is equally apparent that there is an absence of common understanding as to the causes of this lack of adjustment or the manner in which improvement can be made.

"This situation, amounting as it does to a denial of justice in many cases, and to unnecessary expenses and delay in others, is not due to any single defect in our system, but characterizes the system as a whole. Only by a searching examination of all the features of administration of justice can we hope to bring about its improvement."

Just what may be the course Johns Hopkins university plans to pursue to bring benefit from its survey to the public is not set out, but when an institution of the standing and character of Johns Hopkins enters into such an undertaking it is safe to conclude that such matters have been thought out and planned to the uttermost detail, and when men of the standing of Newton D. Baker give their time and effort to such a project its value may be accepted as assured.

There are many men in the country who are gifted in their knowledge of the law, many men who have attained great eminence in the legal profession, many who have keen insight into human nature and are versed in the needs of humanity, but it is to be questioned if any member of the American bar has any preeminence in these lines over the former Cleveland mayor. He is mentally and in his legal knowledge one of the few really great men of the country. His acceptance of the chairmanship of the Ohio study board is high attestation of the value of the survey to be made.

The British Air Tragedy.

The terrific midair explosion over the picturesque little hamlet of Meopham in Kent, England, which blew an air taxi into fragments and caused the death of six persons, was no out of the ordinary, so mysterious, that it demands the utmost investigation.

The plane had taken off from Le Touquet, France, and had reached a point about four miles from Gravesend when there was a mighty detonation, and the villagers looking upward beheld the sky raining human bodies and parts of the machine. Such was the force of the blast that wings, engine and cabin were flung about for hundreds of yards, one of the wings being later found at least two miles from the scene where the six bodies and the engine came down.

If the plane or any part of it caught afire, or if the bodies were burned, no mention of the fact was made in the original cables. Nothing was offered to indicate what caused the explosion, or what exploded. The probable presumption is that the gasoline supply let go, but this has not been established.

Four of the dead were British notables and the other two, the pilot and his assistant. It may be that the blowing into bits of the plane was due to some other force than the explosion of gasoline. If it is possible, this should be determined, for unless the mystery is solved and the cause of the explosion determined, the tragedy is bound to prove a blow to aviation as a means of passenger transportation. The public, or at least a considerable element of the public, is willing to face certain known dangers, but invariably hesitates about facing the unknown.

Four gangsters were electrocuted in Trenton, New Jersey, this week, for the slaying of the paymaster of a corporation there during a hold-up, the electrocution being the second of four persons in that state for the murder of one person. The extreme heat of Monday so expanded two drawbridges over the Harlem river in New York City and a bridge over an arm of the Potomac near Washington that they could not be opened. Occasionally it grows a trifle warm out here in the very heart of the garden spot of the world, but the heat never cuts any such capers as these. Anyway, we haven't any drawbridges.

What was to have been an organized newspaper campaign to make Chicago too hot for its criminal element has degenerated into a mud-slinging campaign in which the papers up there are making targets of each other, variety being introduced occasionally by the instituting of libel suits growing out of the preceding day's so-called news stories.

UNCLE SAM: "IT'S UP TO YOU TO RUSTLE MORE EATS."

Editorial Opinion.

WHERE DOES THE PRIMARY PREVAIL?

When Mr. Calvin Coolidge spoke critically of the direct primary method of selecting United States senators in a recent issue of the Herald Tribune he took the first step toward crystallizing an opposition to this device which has been steadily growing for some years past. His statement and the fact that senatorial primary elections are to be held in twenty states between the middle of July and the end of September make it especially pertinent to examine this problem which is so vitally important to the securing of good government.

In the broadest sense of the phrase, forty-five out of the forty-eight states are direct primary states. The three states rigidly adhering to the convention system of nomination for practically all offices are Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Mexico. But when the field is narrowed down to state-wide offices, such as that of United States senator, the picture is different. In addition to Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Mexico, the states of Idaho, Maryland, Utah and New York nominate senators by party conventions at all times. In Indiana and Iowa senators are so nominated if no one candidate receives a sufficiently large proportion of the primary vote, and the permissive primary, held at the option of the governing authorities of the political parties, obtains in the following six states: Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Kentucky and Virginia. In seven states, therefore, senators are always nominated by convention, and in eight more they are so nominated under certain conditions. This year, with twenty more senatorial primaries to be held, senators will be nominated by convention in only four states—Idaho, Delaware, New Mexico and Rhode Island.

The dissatisfaction with the direct primary system has already borne fruit. In a pamphlet entitled "Nominating Methods," published by the National League of Women Voters, Helen M. Rocco states that "since 1910 it has resulted in legislative action in more than half of the states which employ it. In the legislatures meeting in 1929 alone attempts at partial or complete repeal of the primary laws were made in nineteen states. * * * Idaho in 1919 and New York in 1929 reestablished the state convention for nomination to certain offices. Other significant but unsuccessful, attempts were those in Colorado, where a repeal measure passed both house of legislature in 1925 but was vetoed by the governor; in New Jersey, where a repeal measure was defeated by one vote in the 1926 legislature, and in Vermont, where the repeal measure in 1925 was defeated only by the deciding vote of the lieutenant governor in the senate." On the other hand, she points out, the direct primary has been victorious over the convention system in electoral battles staged in Nevada, Nebraska, Montana, South Dakota, Washington, Arizona and Ohio. In nearly every one of these cases the victory for the direct primary took place as the result of a popular referendum.

The Herald Tribune has gravely doubted the advantages of the direct primary system and sees plentiful indications that this doubt is now widely shared. From time to time it will present on this page further discussion of the subject and analyses of the numerous measures which have been put forward aiming at an improvement of the system. The facts just presented here are fundamental ones, essential to any one who would grapple with one of the most perplexing and vital problems of government facing American today.—New York Herald Tribune, July 21.

MR. HOOVER'S ECONOMY ORDER.

In ordering a searching inquiry into every department and activity of the federal government with a view to bringing about immediate reduction of governmental costs, President Hoover shows once more his characteristic horror of waste. It is no emotion to be satisfied by mere academic expressions. He has set his subordinates the task of effecting actual economies.

Congressional appropriations for the current fiscal year may not be excessive, considering the new projects authorized, projects approved, for the most part, by public sentiment, but the aggregate budget estimates represent an increase of five per cent. over the actual expenditures of the last fiscal year. Still, estimates and appropriations do not compel expenditures, and Mr. Hoover demands that the latter be held down as low as good service will permit regardless of the sums appropriated. Heads of departments and bureaus, if diligent in their search for opportunities to save, the president says, will "find measures for very considerable reductions," measures at once feasible and compatible with efficiency.

No competent student of administrative work and organization doubts that opportunities for retrenchment are discoverable everywhere in public service. Bureaucracy is not distinguished for rigorous economy and the maximum of efficiency. Since the taxpayers are penalized for governmental waste they should be especially grateful to any one in public office who persists in putting forth efforts to reduce costs wherever that is possible.—Chicago News.

Measles Most Contagious Disease.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Infancy and early childhood are subject to many more or less serious contagious diseases. Measles is one of the most common of them.

In and of itself measles is not serious. Like whooping cough, however, it may be followed by bronchitis, pneumonia—which is the most common complication—and tuberculosis. Death rarely occurs in uncomplicated measles in a child over four years of age, but under that age it may be fatal.

When a grown person has an attack of measles it is a serious matter. It goes very hard with such a person. Among Indian tribe it is a fatal ailment.

Measles is the most highly contagious disease known to man. From the time the first symptoms appear until the catarrhal symptoms disappear, for a week or more, the measles patient is a menace to others.

The infection is carried by the secretions of the nose, mouth and throat. It may be transmitted by sneezing or by contact with the secretions in some other manner.

A person is not apt to have measles more than once. But an occasional person may have it a second or even a third or fourth time.

It is a mistake for a mother to deliberately expose her child to the dangers of measles. Until the age of five certainly every effort should be made to avoid the disease. Fatalities are largest among the very young.

Among the first symptoms are a sense of chilliness or a real chill. Fever, headache and a marked increase in the secretions of the nose and throat follow. The eyes are red and run water and are sensitive to the light. The victim is always sneezing and coughing.

In a day or two, or by four days after the first signs, an eruption appears on the face. Dark red, smooth spots come out on the face and then spread to the rest of the body. The skin may itch and burn.

Then there is a peeling process. It is not so pronounced as in scarlet. Next, after the eruption begins to clear away, tiny scales or flakes form on the skin. This may continue for several weeks.

Keep the patient in bed and surround him with all the sanitary means of assisting the cure. The itching of the eruption may be relieved by applying petroleum oil, cocoa butter or cold cream. This helps, too, to keep the scales from floating into the air.

The patient should sleep with the windows open night and day so as to get all the fresh air possible. All complications must be watched for.

Do not neglect a cough that continues. Build up the body by simple food and quiet living. The patient must not be considered cured until all the symptoms disappear.—Copyright, 1930, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Prayer—"Ours, is the hope, the will, the thought: the rest, O God, is in Thy hand."

Archimedes.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

In the midst of countless inventions for our utility and convenience: the screw, the balance, the pulley, innumerable devices for multiplying power—we seldom if ever stop to consider our debt to the original inventor of these devices. This was Archimedes, regarded as the most perfect type of scientific intellect that the world has ever seen. He was a brilliant theorist, and demonstrated that he was probably the greatest mathematician who had lived up to his time.

Moreover, he was a genius as an inventor, who knew how to put his recondite theories into practice. He cared little about the practical part of invention, as compared with his deep love for theorizing and abstractions. But his genius was perforce turned into practical channels by the complaints of the very practical monarch, Hiero, King of Syracuse. As we learn from Plutarch, Archimedes regarded his inventions as among the amusements of geometry, the diversions of science. "Nor had he gone so far," says Plutarch, "but at the pressing instances of King Hiero, who entreated him to turn his art from abstracted notions to matters of sense, and to make his reasonings more intelligible to the generality of men, applying them to the uses of common life."

Archimedes was born in the then great city of Syracuse, in Sicily, in the year 287 B. C. His father was a geometer, and he grew up under royal patronage, deeply pondering, fundamental geometrical problems and remaining in constant correspondence with the leading geometers of Syracuse. He was the lovable type of absent-minded professor, who nevertheless must have been exceedingly trying to his wife. Like Newton, he would become so exceedingly absorbed in his reflections and calculations that he would forget all about dinner and would not come when called. Every schoolboy knows that he hit upon a great discovery while in the bath and, forgetting for the nonce his nudity, rushed out in the street, crying "Eureka!" which means, "I have found it!"

Archimedes discovered the principle of the lever, one of the most powerful of all instruments in engineering, architecture and industry. He invented pulleys and windlasses, the water screw, the endless screw which is found today in high-powered motor cars. He invented various hydraulic and compressed air machines. It has not been disproved that by means of a great burning glass he set on fire part of the Roman fleet besieging Syracuse. As he was pondering some geometrical figures drawn in the sand he was slain by a Roman soldier whom he peremptorily ordered to get out of his light!—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

In London.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

London, July 24—Just as Samuel Pepys, the diarist, was the typical Londoner so is the Strand the city's typical street. It is ugly, narrow, harsh. And yet somehow we all fall under its spell. Like Broadway it is despised and reviled, but remains another cross-roads of the world.

The charm of the Strand to me is in its sudden escapes. One minute you may be a part of its crowded clatter, but by ducking in to any of those innumerable alleys you may be on the banks of the Thames, the Adelphi terrace, among the flowers of Covent garden or in the brooding quiet of Essex street.

The Strand is the promenade for foreigners—especially Americans. The hotels, cafes like Romano's, and theaters, like the Gaiety tend to cosmopolitanise the district. True Londoners look upon it as a yokel lane, but on an evening out they always visit the Strand.

This morning I idled about Charing Cross station in a walk along the Strand. Depots always fascinate me. Everybody is on tip toe of expectancy and under the sway of excitement. From there I wandered among rare old houses in Adelphi terrace. No house in the terrace has ever changed.

Garrick died in No. 4 so a tablet states. Disraeli claimed No. 2, James street, in the terrace as his birthplace. At No. 2 Robert street, Thomas Hood caroled his "Song of the Shirt." All houses suggest Adam ceilings and fire places and furniture by Sheraton and Heppelwhite. You are hushed by an intangible restraint.

Somehow in browsing about my mind was filled with thoughts of men like Pepys who toyed with goblets of incomparable claret, had an appraising eye for a pretty face, fondled rare books and chatted before huge open fire places. For men in gloomy old London has always lived with a superb gusto.

It is only the gaudy omnibuses that relieve the gravity of London streets. Without them there would be no color. On one coming down the hill from Charing Cross to Whitehall I recognized my wife and trotted along to catch up with her. Failing I yelled "Yoohoo!" which seemed vastly to amuse pedestrians.

Fleet street is London's Park row and is hung heavily with the aroma of printer's ink. To those of us accustomed to the quick gait of American newspaper work the tempo of Fleet street seems leisurely and obsolete. The terms "scoop" or "beat" suggest the chill of a death's head at the feast. The London reporter is a true "gentleman of the press." He carries engraved calling cards, sports a lapel flower and upon auspicious occasions dons a tall silk topper. Yet those of us who have spent formative years pulling doorbells and asking impertinent questions are impressed with its journalistic dignity as stated indeed as one of Sir Christopher Wren's lofty spires.

The headline hunters here do not have to swipe furtive peeks from the first pages when passing newsstands. The latest news of the day is proclaimed by men encased turtle-like in bill-boards who walk along the curb slowly with such red banners as "Murder in Clapham" or "Lady Astor Rebuked," etc. Incidentally rebuking Lady Astor appears to be one of the indoor sports in parliament.

No visit to London is up to snuff without a visit to George B. Shaw or the marble arch entrance of Hyde park where political firebrands blow off steam. For a small fee they may mount the portable platform and relieve themselves forensically of their pet grievances. One while I was there was "laying out" Premier MacDonald and took a shot at the United States with: "If'american, what is she doin?" I am cabling this evening to find out now that my curiosity is so aroused.

It is no easy trick to get lemonade when hotbed in London, but with the usual flair for solving problems that do not matter I have found a way. One asks for a "lemon squash." They bring you a lemon cut in halves, a bucket of ice, a lemon squeezer, a spoon, sugar, straws—in fact everything but a passport—and you make it yourself. I not only made lemonade, but removed ink stains from my fingers with the rinds.

There are 350,000 species of insects. Were it not for the birds man would probably lose his age-long fight against insects. And were it not for trees birds would pass away. Strange that we love conflict more than concord.

Cities of the far future will be clean. No soot, no smoke and grime. The day will come when civilized nations will burn fuel that will not make dirt. Until then we are fortunate to have coal cheaply produced, reasonable in price, delivered to our homes. The day will come when coal will not reach city. It will be burned at a distance, changed into gas, the gas brought to us. What is now done in a small way will some day be done in universal practice. We are a long way from civilization until all can share in the benefits devised by science and industry.

One who does good deeds for the pleasure he gets from receiving the gratitude of others will not take a lasting pleasure in his good works. In fact, he will take little pleasure at best. Gratitude is rare. Most people are not grateful or at least do not appear to be. One who forgets the expectancy of gratitude and does good deeds because they need to be done will, in the long run, find the largest satisfaction.

It is said New York contributes $10,000,000 a year to beggars. The begging "racket" is no doubt profitable. Officials say they will start a clean-up. Most northerners will be sorry to hear that English teachers in Oglethorpe, Georgia University, will try and teach the Georgia boys to speak English as it is spoken farther to the states. That's too bad. Most of us prefer the southern manner. It falls pleasantly on the ear and in this day of raucous hubbub anything that is soft and gentle in tone is gratefully received. Let's not look with sympathy on Oglethorpe teachers who would teach Dixie boys and girls to speak the common language in the common way. "Corn-pone" is a prettier word than corn-pone.

Quake Death Toll Rises

duty converted trucks into ambulances and columns of them continued to pass hourly A great number is required because hospital trains are held up in many places by wrecked roadbeds Many highways are torn out or blocked but it is believed that the trucks will be able to reach most of the stricken places by various routes

About 19 of the large buildings in Naples were evacuated for safety today

The earthquakes sharp shocks undulatory in nature began yesterday shortly after 1 a m and the vibrations continued intermittently all day Buildings over the entire area were shaken and it was in the belief of these that the deaths and injuries resulted

Rescue work directed by soldiers and fascist militiamen continued through all of last night by the aid of torchlight while those who survived the disaster slept in parks in fields or anywhere except in buildings, fearing fresh shocks

Not since the earthquake which wiped out Messina in 1908 has Italy seen such widespread destruction

In some instances entire villages were almost obliterated Villanova for more than 350 persons, including the mayor and all of his family And Lucetown which suffered greatly was Melfi with the dead estimated at 151 hundreds of injured and the place itself a mass of debris.

Many families caught asleep when the earth quivered were killed in their beds as their houses tumbled about them

Miles and miles of highways were blocked by the tons of dirt hurled down mountain sides railroads were halted and lines of communication were torn down making computation of the death toll doubly difficult

The stricken country was terror mad after the quakes began As house after house toppled and the cries of victims increased by a terrific thunderstorm And since electric energy was put out in most places they roamed in the bewildering darkness

The grocery company some time ago was awarded a judgment of $189 in common pleas court on its breach of contract suit The company alleged that in 1927 the National Mills then operated by Owens entered into a contract to furnish 600 barrels of flour of a certain grade at $7 10 per barrel but upon cancellation of the contract by the local concern was forced to pay an additional $489 when it bought the flour from another mill

The case passed through both the municipal court and the common pleas court before being carried to the court of appeals Both lower courts ruled in favor of the grocers company

Marion Concern Asks Utilities Commission To Order Reduction in Cost

By Brush Moore Leased Wire

COLUMBUS O July 24—The American Crushed Rock Co with offices at 108 South Main street Marion today filed a complaint against the Columbus Delaware & Marion Electric Co with the Ohio public utilities commission here

The Crushed Rock company claims that the Electric company is charging for a ready to serve current $1 2c a month for each kilowatt the rate being based on a working schedule of 20 days or more per month

Because of a slump in the Crushed Rock company's business it is claimed in the complaint that the plant is able to operate from nine to 15 days a month and feels that the $1 2c a kilowatt charge is too high

The complaint declares it is willing to designate the days on which it operates and asks the commission for an order instructing the C D & M Co for a rate reduction

SAFETY METHODS FOR PRESIDENT DEVISED

Take New Precautions To Safeguard Hoover After Accident.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON July 24 — New safety precautions for President Hoover on his week end trips to Virginia have been devised by the White House secret service as a result of the accident which occurred to one of the cars in his party two weeks ago

The state of Virginia has indicated its willingness to provide the President with a motorcycle escort if it is wanted but Mr Hoover has declined this for his holiday outings

The road to the President's camp is to be more thoroughly patrolled to curb fast driving particularly on Sunday when the President is returning through heavy traffic

A further precaution is to be taken by separating the line of cars that accompanies Mr Hoover

Instead of from five to ten automobiles being in the line in future it is planned for most of the guests to go separately, with only Mr Hoover's car and the secret service machine and possibly one other leading the procession

SHOVEL MAY QUIT SUNDAY BASEBALL

MUD HEN PITCHER TO OPPOSE LOCALS IN FINAL TILT HERE

Lack of Patronage Given as Reason for Abandoning of Pro Sport.

BY BOB ELLIOTT

Unless patronage picks up a great deal better than it has been in the early part of the season, the Marion Steam Shovels will close their 1930 baseball season here next Sunday with the Toledo Old's Motor furnishing the opposition. The Shovel company has been losing money steadily all season and does not feel that it can afford to sponsor Sunday entertainment simply for the old reliable few that attend every Sunday without fail.

The locals will close their season however with one of the toughest nines they could have thought to bringing in. These Oldsmobiles from the Lake City are a real ball club and already hold a 12 to 10 decision over the locals. A letter from the management of the Toledo club today revealed that while Jack Scott may not appear here, a Mud Hen pitcher, Dave Klinger, will be on the mound and if he's any good at all he should have better luck than Scott did in his attempt to subdue the local batters.

Scott took the win over the Shovels but was pummelled to all corners of the lot while doing it. The locals drove out 15 safe blows, six of these going for extra bases. Harry Pino, local shortstop, found the going the best against the former big leaguer, smashing his offerings for three doubles and a triple, which isn't a bad day's work for any ball player. Since the addition of Klinger to the hurling staff however the Olds have lost only one game and have recorded wins over such teams as the Sandusky Studebakers, Monroe, Mich., Merchants, Pleasant Lake, Mich., Jackson, Mich., and the Lansing Elks.

Well we can at least give them a good send-off anyway. It's been a good season.

MAC DONALD SMITH FAVORED IN TOURNEY

Canadian Open Draws Great Field, with Canny Scot Topping List.

By The Associated Press

ANCASTER, Ont., July 24—With Bobby Jones away from the golfing wars for the time being, MacDonald Smith, runner-up to the Atlantan in both the British and American open, is figured to be the best bet for the Canadian Open golf championship opening at the Hamilton Country Club today.

The 38-year-old Scot has been playing some of the best golf of his career but as it happens it was when Bobby was at the top of his game. Mac will not have Jones to contend with on the beautiful rolling Ancaster links.

Mac Smith has a difficult job as practically all of the leading golfers of the North American continent are seeking the title won the past four years by Leo Diegel. The Agua Caliente professional is back to defend his crown and has been burning up the course in practice rounds.

Ambling Alp Seeks Extension of Stay in United States.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 24 — Primo Carnera, the much talked about heavyweight giant from Italy, was in New York today for an interview with immigration authorities.

Carnera, through his manager, Leon See, is seeking an extension of time to remain in the United States, having been ordered to leave because the six months for which he was admitted are up.

The Ambling Alp was scheduled to appear in an exhibition in Montreal last night but came to New York for a conference with the immigration officials, while in Buffalo he and See went to see Niagara Falls. They wanted to see the falls from the Canadian side, so See said, but were turned back because of the lack of passports. On returning they were stopped by United States officials, who believed they were attempting to enter the United States illegally.

See claimed he showed railroad tickets to New York and they were permitted to continue on their way.

ADOLFO LUQUE HERO AS ROBINS TAKE ONE GAME LEAD IN RACE

Jack Quinn, Urban Faber and Eppa Rixey a Few of the Other "Kids" To Win.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Whoever it was that said "youth must prevail" probably would be inclined to retract that statement if he should look at the major league box scores these days. The ancients of the pitching brigade have done just about as much prevailing as the youngsters and often in a more convincing manner.

Adolfo Luque, Cuba's leading baseball hero, age 30, did a great job as he made first place in the national league safe for the Brooklyn Robins. Luque held the St. Louis Cardinals to five hits through a trying duel with Sylvester Johnson while Brooklyn slowly gathered enough momentum to win, 4 to 1. Most of the time, Luque had only a one run lead and it was not until the Cards had tied the count in the seventh that the Robins started hitting.

The Robins' gain was made possible by their neighbors, the New York Giants, who downed the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 6, to put Brooklyn a full game plus a few odd points in the lead. The pitching in this contest was a matter of numbers rather than skill, Chicago using five hurlers and New York four, and the wildness of the Cub throwers was the principal reason for the Giants' four run rally in the fifth which decided the game.

Quinn In Form

Along with Luque, ancient Jack Quinn, of the Philadelphia Athletics whose years number somewhere near 45, above or below, gave the younger pitchers a lesson. Quinn had a little trouble in the ninth inning and George Earnshaw finished the game for him as the A's downed Detroit, 4 to 1, but in his eight innings on the mound which gave him his ninth victory, Quinn allowed only five hits and only three more drives past the infield.

Urban "Red" Faber, second in age to Quinn in this quintet, did not figure as a winner or loser for the Chicago White Sox. After holding a 1-0 lead for five frames, Faber weakened and allowed the Boston Red Sox three runs in the sixth. Hal McKain relieved him and got credit for the victory as Chicago rallied again and gained a 5 to 3 decision. The victory moved Chicago back into sixth place as Washington came back after three straight defeats and pulled

ONE of the biggest crowds of the entire season is expected to be present when the Shovel Club and Erie Roundhouse square off at 6:15 p. m. on the Shovel diamond in a clash that will go a long ways toward deciding the Industrial league championship. The Roundhouse is leading the pack at the present time with only one defeat charged against it. However, a win for the Shovels will put the teams in a virtual tie for the lead and if the "Diggers" ever get up that high they'll be a good bet to come through with the pennant. We're picking the Shovel but it should be no better than an even break.

The game that will decide the Commercial league championship will be played tomorrow evening at Lincoln Park when the Kappas and Steam Shovel A. A. play. Right now the fraternity team holds a two game lead over the Athletic Association nine and a win tomorrow would make it three with only three more games to play. Two of the Kappas' remaining three games are fairly tough with the other one a cinch win. The K. of P.'s and Prospect Firemen can be given an outside chance of edging the "Kups" but Company B—never. No, Oscar, it looks like at least two of the world series entries are "in"—Lee Street and the Kappas.

FRANCIS BACON, manager of the Steam Shovels, announced yesterday that next Sunday's clash with the Toledo Olds Motors would probably bring the Marion professional baseball season to a close. It's too bad, for the Shovel company has given Marion a good ball team, one of the best they've had in recent years but nevertheless they've been losing money and plenty of it. Baron said, however, that if a large enough crowd was present Sunday to warrant continuing of the season more games might be scheduled but it's hardly likely now. If this Toledo team don't draw then no team is going to draw and you can count on that.

Elimination of Chick Evans and Cyril Tolley Feature Play in Western Amateur Tourney.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 24—Johnny Lehman, one of the prize products of college golf, blocked the march of Don Moe, the youthful champion from Portland, Ore., toward another western amateur title as the struggle for the crown went into the quarter-final round over the rugged Beverly Country club course today.

The methodical shotmaker, comedalist, former Big Ten champion and one of the best golfers in the Chicago district, faced the king of western amateurs in a long stretch of 36 holes and while Moe ranked as a slight favorite, the match generally was ranged as a toss-up battle.

Of the two, Lehman was far more impressive in the early flights. He defeated two very capable golfers, Lloyd Nordstrom of Davenport, Ia., and George Dawson, Chicago star, with almost perfect golf yesterday, while Moe, off his game since his return from an invasion of England with the Walker Cup team, weathered the first two tests with poorer golf against more inexperienced foemen—Vincent Huntington, Chicago, and Johnny Howard of Kalamazoo, Mich.

As the quarter-final round opened today all the favorites with two glaring exceptions remained in the fight. The two who were upset were Cyril Tolley of Great Britain and Charles "Chick" Evans. Tolley fell before Bob McCrary, Trans-Mississippi champion from Des Moines, Ia., one up, while Evans was eliminated by the youthful Charlie Fish of Radford, Ill., by the same margin, nineteenth green where his opponent holed a 35 foot putt for a birdie three to clinch his triumph.

All matches from today on are 36 hole affairs with the championship final billed for Saturday.

MUD HEN PITCHER TO OPPOSE LOCALS IN FINAL TILT HERE

Lack of Patronage Given as Reason for Abandoning of Pro Sport.

BY BOB ELLIOTT

Unless patronage picks up a great deal better than it has been in the early part of the season, the Marion Steam Shovels will close their 1930 baseball season here next Sunday with the Toledo Old's Motor furnishing the opposition. The Shovel company has been losing money steadily all season and does not feel that it can afford to sponsor Sunday entertainment simply for the old reliable few that attend every Sunday without fail.

The locals will close their season however with one of the toughest nines they could have thought of bringing in. These Oldsmobilers from the Lake City are a real ball club and already hold a 12 to 10 decision over the locals. A letter from the management of the Toledo club today revealed that while Jack Scott may not appear here, a Mud Hen pitcher, Dave Klinger, will be on the mound and if he's any good at all he should have better luck than Scott did in his attempt to subdue the local batters.

LAST NIGHT at the THEATERS

Marion Has Good Revolution Picture

THE ANGUISH, oppression, hate, defiance and hope of "La Marseillaise," France's national anthem, are understood after seeing "Captain of the Guard" at the Marion for the last times tonight. The picture comes within several weak and unnecessary scenes of being a great picture.

John Boles as Rouget de Lisle, composer of the stirring song, sings better than in several pictures. Laura LaPlante, with her black hair for this picture, is Marie Marnay, known to revolutionists as "The Torch," their symbol of freedom.

After Rouget and Marie learn to love each other, he is called to the service of the king. Marie and her father are royalists until a group of the king's soldiers shoots her father, and then Marie becomes the flame that fires the French revolution.

She is finally thrown in the Bastille. Because of his great love for Marie and the dope he played in bringing about her capture, Rouget addresses his superiors in a treasonable manner. It is while he is undergoing the torment of knowing Marie is imprisoned, and hears the mobs clamoring for their freedom, that he is inspired to write "La Marseillaise."

As the scaffold is being built for Marie to die on, Rouget, who has gone to Marseillaise returns to Paris with an army of 50 men, to turn the tide of the revolution. The march of the men into Paris, all carrying torches and all singing "La Marseillaise," is a stirring scene. Of course Rouget and Marie find each other and happiness.

The picture is resplendent with wonderful scenes of French village life, of life in the poor section of Paris and of the Palace of Louis XVI.

DANCE LOVERS

America's greatest colored band. There are some splendid comedians in the band, of whom Cuba Austin, drummer, formerly a big time vaudeville headliner, is chief. His work is uproariously funny, always artistically done. If you want to be good natured for the rest of the week, dance to them.
